AN OLYMPIAN DAY.

How the Country Boy Won the Race for Benson's Sake.

AN OVAL, level stretch of the greenest grass, bordered by a perfect circle of a tall, slender cinder path. Beyond the path a low fence, over which a leaping deer had leaped a varied mingling of athletic devotees, feminine and affected, from the ragged urchin who had conceived the idea of a race, to the tall, stout man who sighs as his thoughts are carried back to college days—all are there, leaning over or in close proximity to the low fence.

Back of this crowd is the grand stand, moderately well filled with matronly ladies, papa, carpet knights and pretty girls, some of whom doubtless have sons, or nephews, or brothers, or lovers among the knot of athletes out there on the green.

It is a glorious day—a typical October one. The lawn is elastic; the track is superb. The air is bracing, with an aroma of Indian summer in it, and over everything, as if Jupiter Olympian himself had blessed this special occasion with his supernatural approbation, is the smiling azure of a perfect sky.

A very small boy, with his chin just level with the crest of the railing, to which he clings tenaciously, ready to be bribed or coerced from his enviable position, says:

"There they goes on the two-twenty, Tommy!" and looking over the stretch of green we see a bunch of seven or eight forms, dressed in white and blue and red, bound off, as if propelled from their position, whose sharp report reached our ears a moment later.

Round the end of the course they come, keeping well together; the inevitable winners, however, drawing slowly ahead. One hundred yards remain—seventy-five—and look! Out of the half-dozen stragglers there darts a form dressed in blue—a tall, fair, slender youth. There is a cry of warning to the two men who are leading, neck and neck, from some participant. They turn their heads as the slender youth comes, and in that moment the form in blue is a foot behind them—abreast, ahead! and goes flying past us, the winner, in twenty-three seconds! I hear a "well done, boy," in a deep voice that trembles, and I look up and see that the stout gentleman's face is flushed, and that there are tears in his eyes. And then the boy in blue comes over and shakes the big man by the hand, and the father puts his arm around the neck of his son, and the boy in blue, who has been for many a long day the race of the day, the "Benson," is now, and some of the contestants, robed in long blankets, are stalling up and down the path, or running slowly on their toes, in that preliminary little canter that is such a mystery to the majority of the onlookers.

The names are called, and "Green" is missing. Who is "Green"? Nobody knows him. None of the clubs or running men have ever heard of him. But as if a replication to the expressed curiosity, now become general, a very small boy dressed in very large brown sun-spun clothes, and bedecked in a Byron collar, an enormous cravat and a low-crowned stiff hat, smiles down the course between the grand stand and the fence, and spatters between long intervals of breathing:

"Jim's coming! He's coming! In! Here's Jim! Our ole mare—she—broke the shaft this side of Billie's Holler—strut! Rule—Gray's waggie! Rule! As drunk—blame—me! An' here's Jim! But we got—here—just the same. Here's Jim now!"

Attention was now centered on "Jim"—that genuine, undivided public attention that will forget you a moment later if your head sinks an inch below the line of novelty.

"Give you three minutes, Green," called the starter, and "Green's" dust-stained figure disappeared in the doorway of the dressing-room.

I was not propositioned with "Jim's" physique as applicable to pedestrianism; but at the first glance I experienced an instinctive liking for the boy's face. It was plain and honest, with a square jaw and a delicate but firm mouth.

If, however, I was not gratified with "Jim's" form, and his physique, and his undivided public attention that will forget you a moment later if your head sinks an inch below the line of novelty.

Pimples AND Blotches

ARE EVIDENCE That the blood is impure, and that nature is endeavoring to throw off the impurities. Nothing is so beneficial in assisting nature as Swift's Specific (S. S. S.). It is a simple vegetable compound, it is harmless to the most delicate child, yet it forces the poison to the surface and eliminates it from the blood.

I contracted a severe case of blood poison that unfitted me for business for four years. A few bottles of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) cured me. J. C. JONES, City Market, Fulton, Arkansas.
